Injures Foot While Handling Weapon

As Mr. Paul Bradney manager of the A. C. Bauch locker at Frankfort was examining a sharp war weapon knife last Thursday as he and his wife and daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Subbert, were guests in the Harold Subbert home in Monee, it accidentally slipped from his hand and struck his left ankle. The knife went thru his ankle at an angle and came out the other side.

Mr. Bradney was taken at once to the office of Dr. W. V. Hedges in Frankfort who sewed the two main arteries which had been severed, as well as the large gashes on both sides of the foot.

Mr. Bradney who is confined to his home, and will be for the next two weeks, is doing nicely.

"Editorial"

by The American Legion

Eighty seven thousand members of the Cook County Council of the American Legion this week join with all other good Americans in prayers of thankfulness that this year Thanksgiving Day came as a day of peace, good will, and plenty for the people of this great nation.

Our thoughts of gratitude must be sobered by the knowledge that thousands of our brave men gave their lives to make this a day of peace. We of the Legion re-dedicate ourselves to the eternal work of promoting peace, in their memory, and with a full measure of gratitude for the sacrifice they made.

We are also mindful that many of our comrades still remain in hospitals, suffering mental and physical disabilities incurred during their defense of our great nation. We pray once more that they will be brought back to health and happiness, and we affirm our purpose of extending even greater efforts in their behalf, so that they will once more know the full meaning of Thanksgiving Day.

The American Legion also takes this occasion to remind its members and others that many veterans still are in great need of suitable jobs, homes for their families, and other assistance to enable them to take their fitting place in the country whose democratic way of life they are responsible for preserving. We shall never relax in our efforts until these men can on this day express thanksgiving for the things that the rest of us are privileged to enjoy.

The American Legion, through its nearly four million veterans, thanks God for a great nation, at peace with the world. We re-dedicate our efforts to the end that all men may share in the opportunities for which we express our gratitude on this day. Lastly, we are deeply humbled in the memory of the tremendous effort and sacrifices made by our veterans who, with God's help and guidance enabled us to work out our problems as free men. We shall strive to justify the heritage they saved for us today.

WILL YOU SUPPORT THE SISTER KENNY INSTITUTE FOR A CLINIC IN COOK COUNTY?

A campaign is under way to establish two Sister Kenny Clinics in Illinois, one in Cook County, the other in downstate, where all polio sufferers, regardless of race, creed, color or the ability to pay, may receive the benefits of this near-miraculous treatment. The building and the personnel have already been selected for Cook County clinic, and it will be opened to the public as soon as the necessary funds are available.

Nearly 1000 boys and girls have been discharged from the Sister Kenny Institute in recent weeks with strong and straight bodies, due to the care and treatment received.

Sister Kenny does not claim to have a 100 per cent cure for polio, but actual case histories in Minneapolis show that 85 per cent of all patients receiving her treatment are saved from any crippling effects, while practically all of the remaining 15 per cent are restored to the important degree of becoming self-sufficient citizens.

If you would like to give to this cause, you may send your check to this newspaper who will be glad to send it to the Chicago office, or you may send your check direct to Sister Kenny Foundation, 537 South Dearborn Street, Chicago 5, Ill. Make your check in either instance to the Sister Kenny Foundation.

TINLEY PARK GETS $6,150

FROM U. S. TO PLAN SEWER

Tinley Park Village has been planning for a sewer for some time. Last week the federal works administration advanced $6,150 to the Village Board to finance preparation of plans and specifications for a complete sanitary sewer system and sewage disposal plant. The estimated cost of the sewer system and disposal plant is $186,000.

At a special Board meeting Monday evening an ordinance was passed admitting the Hartman farm of 160 acres into the corporate limits. This land is bounded on the north by 167th Street, on the east by Ridgeland Ave., on the south by 171st Street and on the west by Oak Park avenue.

The A. A. Lewis Real Estate firm of Chicago is the promoter of this subdivision. They expect to build homes there this fall. They are building streets, laying water mains and installing fire hydrants, according to the Village specifications. This promises to be a very fine home site and it is expected that it will not be very long before many new people will move into that section.

The Village engineers are also working on another project for Tinley Park that of building storm sewers on Oak Park Avenue, large enough so that all side streets may empty into it, which in turn will empty into Tinley creek or the north end of the village.

STOLEN CAR RECOVERED

NEXT DAY

Mr. Dunn, druggist in charge of the Cavett Drug Store in Mokena, had a little excitement last Friday night, when the car he was using while his own was being repaired, was stolen.

The stolen car was a 1938 Studebaker, four door grey sedan and had been parked next to the drug store. It was about 10 pm. when he noticed it was gone and he reported it to the Will County sheriff's office. The next day when Mr. Edwin Shaw of Palos Park came to the drug store, he happened to mention that he noticed a parked car standing about a block south of 159th street on Wolf Road, and his description of it tallied with the lost car. Mr. Shaw took Mr. Dunn to the spot and there he found the car. The keys were not in it and two seat cushions were taken out. They pulled it back to town.

HUGE CHICAGO SHOW

OPENING NOV. 30

Heading the list of events on the December calendar of stockmen and farmers of the United States and Canada is the "Victory" International Live Stock Exposition and Horse Show, which will open this week in the International Amphitheatre at the Chicago Stock Yards.

The 47th annual Exposition is scheduled for November 30 to December 7, after a war time lapse of five years.

Officials of the show announce that entries are listed by stockmen and farmers from 35 states and Canada. Pure bred herds and flocks, top specimens from prominent farms and ranches, are now en route to Chicago from such distances as California, the Atlantic Seaboard, Canada and Texas.

All pre-war records are broken in the number of entries of prime beefs, lambs and hogs that 4H and FFA boys and girls have listed for the junior classes of the show, which will be judged on the opening day, November 30. The entry of 1622 animals, owned by 988 youths from 13 states and Canada, is 113 percent larger than at the last pre-war exposition five years ago.

Another opening day feature will be a national live stock judging contest for agricultural college students. The contestants, largely war veterans, will be scored on their ability to judge classes of beef cattle, draft horses, sheep and swine.

The International is the nation's leading show of the beef breeds of cattle, sheep and swine. Shorthorn cattle breeders from 14 states and Canada will exhibit. Herefords are coming from 25 states and the Dominion, and Aberdeen-Angus from 19 states and Canada. Sheep are on the way from 14 states and Canada, draft horses from 15 states and Canada, and swine from eleven states.

It is reported that nearly 1000 horses are listed for exhibition this year. They include the ton weight draft types as well as pleasure horses and ponies.

All will be seen in daily performances and competition at the Exposition's Horse Shows, which are among the country's top events of this kind.

FARMERS DEMAND GOVERNMENT ECONOMY

Organized agriculture in Illinois is demanding a cut in federal expenditures and a balanced budget for the nation.

Delegates to the 32nd annual convention of the Illinois Agricultural Association, the state Farm Bureau organization of 130,800 farmers, made this point unmistakably clear in the resolutions adopted at the closing sessions Thursday, Nov. 21.

These delegates, elected by local Farm Bureau members representing every county in the state, furnished a good picture of what rural people are thinking of today's problems.

They said "It is time to revive some old ideas of honor, honesty and loyalty, as the guiding principles of reconstruction and peace. It is time to forsake nostrums and palliatives as cures for economic ills. It is time to be diligent rather than expedient. Let us lead forward to achievement in peace, to the full measure of gainful bounty that will come from toil and never from dole. America can be as great as we will work to make her great."

Delegates urged the adoption of a national soils fertility policy and program to assure farmers greatly increased supplies of high analysis mineral fertilizer, particularly phosphorus and potash.

A resolution opposed the construction of land by the government and construction of impounding dams proposed in the federal flood control plan for the Illinois River Basin. It went (Continued to back page)

PAST AND PRESENT . . . In connection with 50th anniversary of establishment of rural mail delivery, the past and present of the postal service are depicted in this picture. A navy helicopter is shown making a perfect three-point landing on a huge replica of a new five-cent airmail stamp. The stage coach at right symbolizes the type used to deliver mail in the last century.

GOLDEN JUBILEE

Dire Predictions on Founding Of R. F. D. Fail To Materialize

WNU Features

From a humble beginning in 1896 when four men on horseback and a boy on a bicycle embarked on the first experiment in carrying mail to rural areas, the rural free delivery service of the post office department has expanded to a $100,000,000 enterprise as it notes the 50th anniversary of its establishment this year.

Financed by a congressional appropriation of $40,000, the initial experiment of free mail delivery in Jefferson county, W. Va., was viewed by some as "socialistic" and "ridiculous."

When Representative John O'Donnell of Michigan introduced the first bill for a rural mail delivery system in 1892, critics in congress declared that sending men and horses all up and down rural America with the mail would bankrupt the country.

Doomed Gatherings.

Others argued that mail delivered to the farmer's door would give him less opportunity to gather at the post office store and thus would destroy his social life.

Even some farmers were reluctant to sign up for the experiment, one West Virginia farmer who liked his toddy seeing his regular excuse for coming into town being snatched away from him.

Postmasters themselves often were unhappy about the proposal. Many postmasters, particularly in small communities, were storekeepers as well and they gloomily foresaw loss of customers as the need to come in for the mail was taken away.

Small Offices Closed.

Other postmasters were worried that the new system would eliminate the need for their little crossroads post office. Actually, rural free delivery did result, in the course of time, in discontinuance of some 30,000 fourth class post offices.

Some unrealistic souls were worried that farmers would be spoiled by such a luxury service. They foresaw farmers emulating city folks, even to the extent of refusing to stir from the house until the morning paper had been read.

In 1893, however, a bill providing for an experimental rural mail delivery route received congressional approval. Three years later enough money was available to begin the West Virginia experiment.

Within nine months, R.F.D. had grown to 82 routes, operating from 43 post offices in 29 different states. Ten years later this number had increased to 37,723 routes covering nearly a million miles of road. Since that time rural roads have been improved, permitting a consolidation of routes and a reduction in the number. Total miles covered by carriers, however, have been increased.

Serve Eight Million.

Now, on the 50th anniversary year, 32,161 rural routes are in operation, 426 of them being tri-weekly routes. Thousands of friendly rural carriers, rain or shine, carry mail to nearly eight million families along R.F.D. routes today.

Average length of R.F.D. routes is 44.8 miles. Longest route, covering 101 miles, operates out of Antonito, Colo. The shortest is 6 miles, operating from Glenshaw, Pa. Average daily travel for the entire R.F.D. is 1,433,601 miles, or more than 57 times the distance around the earth at the equator.

Total expenditure for the R.F.D. during the fiscal year ending June 30 was $106,846,521, representing a cost of $3.50 a year per patron.

Transportation Varies.

For years the mail was carried in buggies drawn by teams. Later specially-built, weatherproof wagons were utilized. Now, most persons on rural routes get mail delivered by automobile, of course, but there still are many routes in northern states where horses and sleighs come into use in winter and some in mountain states where horseback delivery still is in vogue.

Rural free delivery proved itself a boon to rural dwellers from the first, relieving the isolation of farm life. With more rapid distribution of newspapers and magazines, it moved not only the town but also the state, nation and world into rural communities. It saved farmers trips to towns.

Varied Services.

In the best tradition of rural mail delivery, carriers have secured aid for sick people, notified farmers that their stock was out, put in fire alarms, helped with stalled vehicles and performed innumerable other services.

The main job of R.F.D., however, is to get the mail through, and in these 50 years carriers have more than carried on the postal mandate—given in the New York post office's free translation from Herodotus, ancient Greek historian:

"Not snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

Old Revolutionary Mine Discovered

DOVER, N. J.—Discovery of an old iron mine in an unsurveyed wooden section of Picatinny arsenal's reservation recalled Revolutionary war period mining in this area. The old mine was found by two arsenal guards while posting "no gunning" signs.

Abandoned mine workings have been discovered in the four northern New Jersey counties of Morris, Warren, Sussex and Passaic. Seldom, however, are large workings uncovered that have gone unnoticed for years.

Arsenal engineering division maps reveal that Chester Iron company was one of the early owners of the abandoned mine site. Officials believe the workings may have been either the Copperas mine or Green Pond mine. Ore for cannon balls for Washington's Continental army was taken from both mines.

12,000 G.I.s Abandon War Brides

NEW YORK. — At least 12,000 wartime marriages between American soldiers and foreign women already have broken up, R. G. Mastrude, official of the international migration service, reported on his return to the United States after conducting a survey in Europe.

In a large percentage of cases, Mastrude said, the G.I. brides were simply abandoned.

"The soldier goes home, and that's the last his wife in Europe ever hears of him. We have discovered that a great many have false addresses in America. Countless marriages were bigamous, the man already having a wife in the United States," Mastrude declared.

Branding international agreements on divorce laws as "unfortunate," Mastrude said it is possible for an American to divorce a foreign wife without notifying her.

A LETTER ON CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—Acts 19:23-30; Ephesians 6:13-18.
MEMORY SELECTION—Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.—Ephesians 6:10.

The war is never over for the Christian. He is called to a constant strife against the world, the flesh and the devil, which knows no armistice or peace conference so long as he lives or the Lord tarries. Paul, who had now set out on his third missionary journey, was this time permitted of the Holy Spirit to witness and minister in Asia.

For three months he spoke in the synagogue, as was his custom, but when his ministry resulted in many converts others hardened themselves in opposition. So he withdrew (a bit of strategy in this spiritual warfare) to neutral ground in the "school of one Tyrannus," where he could teach and reason with them daily.

Paul knew by experience that this could not go on, for he had learned as we should learn to

I. Expect Opposition — It Will Come (Acts 19:23-30).

The comfortable and contented Christians of our day who just want to be let alone to carry on their worship are certainly not related to the real Christians of Paul's type.

The enemy of our souls is often content to let us go on in comparative peace as long as we do not bother him unduly, but once we put up the banner of a holy life and service in God's army, he begins a terrific counterattack. Paul had felt it already in the hardening of listeners' hearts (v. 8).

1. Selfish Opposition (vv. 23-27). One way to bring a violent reaction against spiritual truth is to let it interfere with business. Demetrius and his fellow silversmiths professed to be concerned about the threatened destruction of the heathen worship of Diana.

Many of the enemies of the gospel in our time are fighting against God's Word because they are in a business which is condemned by it.

2. Senseless Tumult (vv. 28-30). Knowing that their opposition was without true foundation, they inspired and agitated a wild demonstration.

Shouting a slogan which had no real meaning, they lent their voices to the tumultuous agitation against God. Finally, one sensible man, fearing the punishment of city officials, quieted them (Acts 19:35-41).

The Ephesians were just like many in our day who fear man more than God. But, may we ask, if you fear the judgment of men, how think you to escape the judgment of God? After all, it is God and His Word you oppose, unconquered friend. Do you think He will hold you guiltless?

Paul was not afraid (v. 30), for he had also learned that the servant of the Lord can

II. Count on God—He Will Deliver (Eph. 6:13-18).

Writing to the church in this very city where the Lord opened "a great door and effectual" for Paul (1 Cor. 16:9), he admonishes them and us to make full use of the provision which God has made for victorious warfare.

There is a complete armor, and a mighty weapon, the sword of the Spirit, but none will do us the slightest good unless we put it on and go into battle. If we think we can do without the breastplate of righteousness (and some Christians and church workers seem to think they can), or neglect to carry and use the shield of faith, we can only expect defeat. We fight great spiritual enemies (see vv. 11, 12 of this chapter) and we need the best in both offensive and defensive equipment.

The girdle of truth binds up the warrior and eliminates the hindrances to rapid movement. The breastplate is righteousness, not his own but Christ's, but it must be appropriated and used.

The soldier must be well shod for the long rough journeys and to give him a good foothold in the day of battle. Peace in the heart provides such a firm vantage point in the fight for God.

Faith is the quickly moved shield, catching all the fiery darts. Here again it is not my faith or yours alone, but our faith in God, putting him between us and our enemies.

The sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, is our all-powerful weapon. Let us not neglect to use it. We are so prone to talk about the Bible, to defend it, to argue for its truths. Talking about a sword does not make it effective. Let's really use it.

Prayer is always to be counted on and it is both a defensive and offensive weapon. It keeps us in touch with the Captain of the Lord's hosts. We call for help, get orders and transmit news of victory through prayer.

Instruction sheets accompanying the poster enable teachers to use the safety lessons to the best advantage for pupils of all ages in various localities.

Tinley Park News

We want more news from Tinley Park. Won't you please call us at Tinley Park 728, or drop us a line by mail and give us news of your guests; where you visited; what you saw; when you entertained? Other readers like to know what is doing in Tinley Park.

The Tinley Park Methodist church School Christmas program will be given on Christmas Eve. Watch for further information.

Ted Doward Evans, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. V. Evans of R. 2 Tinley Park, has completed recruit training at Great Lakes Naval Training Center, and has been advanced to seaman 2-c. Evans, who enlisted for three years entered the Naval Service Sept. 3, 1946.

St. George Ladies' Society

The next regular meeting of the St. George Ladies' Society will be held on Monday evening, December 2, 1946 in the church proper at 8 o'clock. After the opening services, a short, but very important, meeting will be held in the social hall.

Plans are being made for the annual Christmas Party for the children of the parish. As this number is increasing every year, we need more helpers for Santa Claus than ever before. This is also the meeting in which the annual election of officers takes place. We are very anxious to have the new members participate in this election as well as our friends of long standing so that the voice of all may be represented throughout the coming year. The only way for this to be done is for every one to be present.

Won't you please come to this meeting and bring at least one other person with you. If you are looking for transportation, please call a neighbor she will be very glad to have your company.

—Ethelyn Mehren, President

American Legion Aux. 615 News

The social meeting was held in the Village hall Nov. 22 with 22 members present. After our president, Gertrude Jacobs opened the meeting, the Commander of the Post, Martin Uthe was escorted to the front by the Sgt. at Arms, Edna Clark. He asked the ladies to help the Post in their "Gift to the Yanks That Gave" program. Boxes will be placed in various stores for the gifts. The Legion will have a notice in paper in regard to the gifts that you can give and how to wrap them. The Auxiliary is planning a Christmas party for its members December 27. Each member to bring a 50c gift for the exchange.

Dena Hansen, Past Pres. chairman reported Past Presidents met at the home of Gertrude Jacobs Nov. 19 sewing carpet bags and wrapping gifts for the Nurses at Hines for Christmas. Gertrude Jacobs, Frances Rowden and Mamie Brandau made the trip to Vaughn's with cigarettes and candy for 240 patients.

The hostesses for the evening were Lottie Burleson, Mrs. Bellante and Ruth Bettenhausen. Bunco was played and refreshments of cake and coffee and candy were enjoyed by all.

Dena Hansen was the lucky winner of the award.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 24, was:

"SOUL AND BODY"

The Golden Text was:

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service" (Rom. 12: 1).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. . . . For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened; not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life" (II Cor. 5: 1, 4).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"Man is not a material habitation for Soul; he is himself spiritual. Soul, being Spirit, is seen in nothing imperfect nor material. . . . Soul is the substance, Life, and intelligence of man, which is individualized, but not in matter. Soul can never reflect anything inferior to Spirit. . . . Remember that Truth is greater than error, and we cannot put the greater into the less. Soul is Spirit, and Spirit is greater than body. If Spirit were once within the body, Spirit would be finite, and therefore could not be Spirit" (pp. 477, 223).

Rufe's Ramblings

By Rufe Pickett

Because of the roaring water on the one side and the steep rocky mountain on the other it has been said that should a bobcat get off a train up along the Bearcat River it would only have two choices in which direction it might start traveling on foot, and I might add that is one more option than Pred Early had one night when the up freight, on which he was the flagman, whistled him out. The next day he met the trainmaster down the line and he sez to Pred, "Didn't you violate an important rule up along the river last night?" and Pred sez, "No. We stopped and I went back immediately with flagman's signals—and when recalled I left two torpedoes and a burning fusee." "Yes," sez the boss, "That's just what Pat Morrison, the engineer on the up passenger told me, but don't you know fuses should never be placed on anything where fire can be communicated?" Pred stood and thought about the glaring eyes of the night before and how he had lighted the flare and thrown it straight at whatever animal it was behind them, and of its pell melling down the crack with the flaming banderillero sticking in its hinder parts, and he sez, "Boss, I'll tell you what happened. I met up with a mountain lion when I went back. I called, kittle, kittle, kittle, and since it was the first kind words it ever heard a human say I was literally heaping coals of fire. . . ." "Well," sez the train master, "Just be a little more careful with your words of kindness next time cause this receptor flagged the up passenger and then ran under a pile of crossies."

No telephone rate increase in 20 years for over 97% of all our customers

The present level of telephone rates was, with few exceptions, established in the early 1920's. For over 97% of our customers there's been no rate increase in 20 years.

Yet, the cost of providing telephone service to you has been climbing higher and higher.

True, we're doing more business than ever before. But expenses have risen faster than income.

Payroll costs alone have more than doubled since 1940. Prices of materials and equipment, needed to maintain your service, have greatly increased.

That explains why Illinois Bell's present rate of earnings is as low as in our worst depression year—and why we have reluctantly decided that we must ask for an adjustment in rates.

SHRINKING COAL STOCKS for Gas Making THREATEN GAS SUPPLY

Continuation of the work stoppage in the nation's bituminous coal mines would seriously affect normal service to our gas customers.

This is due to the fact that the Public Service Company normally relies in part on coal-produced gas which is mixed with natural gas to make up the total gas supply for our customers.

In this emergency, heavy cold weather demands, combined with the coal shortage, COULD cause the total requirements to exceed the greatest supply we can provide.

The Illinois Commerce Commission and the company join in urging all customers to cooperate in reducing their use of gas.

HERE ARE WAYS YOU CAN HELP:

1. If you heat your premises with gas, keep temperatures no higher than necessary to maintain health.
2. Don't use your gas range to heat the kitchen.
3. If you heat water with gas, don't use more hot water than is essential.
4. Reduce as much as possible the use of all other gas appliances.

Civilian Production Administration has issued an order providing for curtailment of deliveries of gas for certain industrial and commercial uses if coal stocks fall below specified amounts.

We are confident that we will have your full cooperation during this emergency.

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 613-8
by Sandy King

SKY STORE— I remember vividly when I was a small child on the farm, the excitement caused by the monthly call of the huckster wagon. The first modern version of the old huckster store took to the air last week. A converted transport Douglas DC-4 plane has been fitted as a flying merchandiser, and will serve as a showroom for Atlas Supply Co. On a coast to coast tour of over eight hundred cities it will be used to advise retailers on modern methods in selling aircraft and automotive accessories.

THE AIRPORT at St. Charles, Illinois, may soon be opened to the public. Shortly after the beginning of World War 2 it was purchased by the Reconstruction Finance Corp. and is now held by the War Assets Administration. Located just a few miles east of St. Charles, but in DuPage County, it is coveted by both St. Charles and DuPage County authorities. A meeting scheduled to take place this week between Mayor I. C. Langum of St. Charles and John J. Kelly, Chairman of DuPage County Board, may iron out the difficulties and the field be opened for public use soon.

CHECK POINTS—Civil Air Patrol planes are flying rescue missions in Colorado following the death-dealing blizzards of the last two weeks. Bendix Aviation Corp. announces development of an unusually small range radio receiver for light personal planes not equipped with storage batteries. It is being shown publicly for the first at the National Aircraft Show now in progress in Cleveland. Republic Aviation Corp. increases the price of its all metal "Seabee" from $4,995 to $6,000. Stinson Division of Consolidated Vultee Aircraft is replacing the famed L5 "Flying Jeep" with a new all-metal jack of all trades liaison plane. Designated the L13 by the AAF, it will be powered by a 245 H.P. Franklin engine, has unusually broad flaps, and can land in 227 feet at a speed of 43.5 M.P.H. Civil Air Patrol Illinois Wing Headquarters, announces a two hour study course in Jet Propulsion will be held each Monday night at Chanute Field.

STREAMLINED—The Publicity pictures of Miss Aviation of 1946 chosen to preside over the National Aircraft show at Cleveland, Ohio certainly aren't on a "high plane". The Show may be complete with all the trimming but she certainly isn't, too much fuselage showing!

AIRPORT NEWS. Washington Park Airport—Visited with Betty Porter in the flight office a few minutes last Sunday and learned that more than 80 G.I.'s have been in training there since March. More than a dozen have completed their training and are now employed. The port has 50 planes based there, and serves almost 200 civilian flyers.

RUBINKAM AIRPORT—After just one week of training, First Solos were made by four G.I.'s. They are Bob Russ, Norman Carlson, Donald Brennan and Bill McAleer. Ray Hinch piloted the twin engine Cessna to Freeport, Ill. last Wednesday. He was accompanied by Reggie Renaud who continued on to Kings Gateway, Mich. for a ten days hunting trip with friends. Seven Canadian AT-6 planes, flown by civilian pilots, landed at Rubinkam last Wednesday. All were war surplus aircraft enroute from the Canadian West Coast, via Los Angeles, Cal. to Newark, N. J. where they were to be released to private buyers. Bob Funk, piloting the red Taylorcraft, and N. L. Hardinger of Tinley Park, flew x-country to Benton Harbor, Mich. Sunday. Wing Dips to Russ Langenderfer for the bright shine on the Beverly Flying Club's silver BT-13.

A Lesson In Conservation

We were sitting on Bill Webster's porch the other night, chatting over a glass of beer—when the talk turned to forest preservation, soil erosion, and other things that affect a farming community.

Judge Cunningham speaks up: "It's all right to worry about conserving our natural resources," he says, "but there's a far bigger problem when it comes to conservation—and that's preserving our democratic way of life, our sense of personal freedom, our respect for one another's rights."

From where I sit, the Judge is right. All America's great resources, our abundant natural wealth, are lost the minute we lose the right to work them as free people in a free land!

Whenever you see or hear of an encroachment on our rights—whether it's the right to free speech, or the right to vote as we see fit, or the right to enjoy a friendly glass of beer in licensed, law-abiding places... watch out!

Brands Old
The brand idea is as old as any known institution of civilization. It marked the beginning of a philosophy in business by which the producer openly assumed a responsibility for his product to the purchaser. Earliest excavations have revealed paving bricks marked with the brand name of the manufacturer, and during the period of the guilds in Europe, the use of brands was highly developed. Infringements were harshly dealt with. A textile manufacturer who omitted his trade-mark was often punished by having his right hand removed.

Over 10 years ago scientists isolated these pterins from the wings of butterflies, but were prohibited from continuing experiments by Hitler's order.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY OF NORTHERN ILLINOISYoung Economist

By GEORGE S. BENSON
President of Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

I MET a young economist in England. His thinking revealed that he would like to see the complete crumbling of the present order and the ultimate nationalization of England. His discussion showed too that he would thoroughly relish failure of the "capitalistic order" in America, which he boldly predicted would surely come within a few years.

Notable thing about this young man is that he is very influential in the Labor government. He talked freely and with spirit, and the enthusiasm he exhibited shows conclusively which school of thought in England is on the defensive. It is unfortunate when Truth and Right are no longer on the crusade, but instead must be called to the defensive.

Influence I ASKED this young of Youth economist the secret of the growth of the Socialist party in the United Kingdom. Displaying political acumen which is engendered only from a thorough understanding of reality and a knowledge of facts, this economist said that victory in the last election in close districts came because of the vote of the young people.

"In fact, the percentage of young people who voted the Socialist ticket was greater than the percentage of older people in the ranks of Labor," he told me, adding a fact I knew already: that the growth of Socialism has been more rapid among young people and among skilled workers. The influence of higher education, he stoutly affirmed, was a definite factor in the spread of Socialism throughout the Kingdom.

I did not encourage him in this regard about America, but the parallel was clear. I found myself wishing that our own high schools and colleges were doing a better job of building into the very fiber of American youth a deep appreciation for the fundamental principles of our American way of life, lest our youth someday lead this nation down that same unfortunate road.

Unlimited STRANGE irony it Riches? is, that wealth created by honest work is used in the form of taxes and in grants as means to destroy the philosophy which begot our freedom and our wealth. Small wonder that this young economist declared the voting age must be lowered quickly, a step which would insure the continued advance of Socialism in Britain.

Failure of the private enterprise system in America, our young economist said, would soon come because of the inability of business to operate at a loss. This thing the government could do indefinitely, just for the sake of maintaining employment, he affirmed, insisting there is no limit to deficit financing available to government-owned economy.

I have never been able to convince myself that Socialistic and Communistic minded economists could be sincere in advocating this philosophy, characteristic though it is of their thinking. If the principle were workable, why does not some Communist nation issue a million dollar credit to each of its citizens and let them all enjoy wealth in a nation that cannot go broke?

Many Loans to G.I.s

Approximately 14,000 veterans each week are obtaining guaranteed home loans valued in excess of 75 million dollars under the G.I. bill, according to an announcement by Gen. Omar N. Bradley, director of Veterans' administration.

As of October 30, General Bradley says that more than 386,700 veterans have financed home loans totalling $2,060,000,000 with the aid of the government guarantees under the G.I. bill.

Current average for each loan is approximately $5,800 although Veterans' administration pointed out that this figure does not necessarily reflect the average selling price of homes constructed and purchased under the program. Loans for alterations and improvements to homes of eligible veterans also are included in the total and these involve lesser amounts.

Farm loans approved for a guarantee as of October 4, totalled 14,331 with a face value of $51,413,772.

Business loans approved as of the same date numbered 36,510 with guarantees of $44,722,345 and total principal of $112,136,695.

Out of the 386,700 home loans, only 42 foreclosures have resulted in claims against the government. Of the 14,331 farm loans there have been 12 foreclosures and of the 36,510 business loans there have been 237 foreclosures.

Despite denials by various real estate and builders lobbies that the veterans' housing program is working, the number of home loans as announced by the VA would seem to bear out the claims of Administrator Wilson Wyatt of the emergency housing program.

Questions and Answers

Q. I was solely dependent on my son. I received a letter from Veterans' administration in Columbia, S. C., June 10, 1946, and they informed me that records in the office disclose that the claim file of the veteran now is located in the central office in Washington. I am unable to work and I have to see the doctor every week. I have a girl in college and two children under 18. Will you please give me some information about where I can claim a pension for the death of my son?—P. P., Batesburg, S. C.

A. The office of the Veterans' administration in Columbia certainly should take care of your claim. However, since you already have written them, I would suggest that you write direct to the Claims section of the Veterans' administration, Washington, D. C., giving your son's full name, point of induction into the army, his serial number, the manner of his death and where he died if you know. If he was killed in action or his death was incurred while in service, you certainly are entitled to a pension.

Q. My son enlisted in the U. S. navy at Des Moines, February 6, 1945, and was discharged at Minneapolis July 9, 1946. His navy honorable discharge was lost. He cannot receive any educational training or college under the G.I. bill of rights. I have all other papers, date of discharge and everything except the large copy. Is there any place a certified copy of his discharge could be obtained?—Mrs. E. B., Corwith, Iowa.

A. The nearest office of the Veterans' administration where your son would apply for educational training will have all information concerning obtaining a certificate of discharge. However, you may write to the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Washington 25, D. C., giving your son's full name, serial number, place of enlistment and discharge, and they will send a certificate in lieu of discharge papers.

Q. I have some invasion currency, Austrian. I sent it to the office of the chief of finance in Washington, but "no soap." Can you tell me what I could do to get it exchanged into American currency?—E. L., Houlika, Miss.

A. You can do nothing. Invasion currency is worth nothing in this country and it is good only for exchange within the country of occupation. In this case, the currency would be good only in Austria.

Q. I am the wife of an insane World War I veteran. He never has drawn a pension and we have three children under 18, two small ones. I want to know if I can draw from the government.—Wife, Fyffe, Ala.

A. If your husband's condition is due to service or if it is not service incurred and he is totally disabled, he would be entitled to a disability pension. Suggest that you apply to the nearest Veterans' administration office, probably at Birmingham, and tell them your story. They will determine upon examination the amount of pension.

Home Pasteurization Now Proven Practical

Small Herd Owner Now Able to Sell Pure Milk

Pasteurization — the process of heating milk or cream to kill the micro-organisms — has been generally accepted throughout the nation. Most states do not have laws covering pasteurization. Without exception, however, leading cities require this safeguard.

Development of home type of pasteurizers now makes it possible for the Safgard home dairyman, no matter how small his herd, to pasteurize the milk he produces.

To meet U. S. public health requirements, the temperature of the milk is held at 143 degrees usually for 30 minutes, after which cooling is accomplished by either flowing cold water through the unit or by placing the milk container in a cooling tank.

Dairymen will find, in most localities, that they can increase their profits as well as insuring the health of their customers by selling only pasteurized milk. Portable units now on the market will permit farmers, who do not market to creamery units, to provide pasteurized milk.

KNOW YOUR BREED

Chester White By W. J. DRYDEN

Chester Whites originated in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and are believed to have descended from a cross of English hogs, Yorkshire, Lincolnshire and Cheshire.

The breed is prolific, has a good disposition, early maturing and good feeder. White in color, they are also exceptionally good dressers. Six months' boars weigh 225 pounds; gilts, 200 pounds; yearling boars, 500 pounds; gilts, 400 pounds. Mature boars will weigh 900 pounds and sows 700 pounds.

Boars are rugged, with head features, bone and primary sex characters well developed. Sows are refined in head and hair coat, roomy of middle with well developed udders. The hair is straight and fine, particularly on sows.

Concrete Milk Cooler

Concrete cooling tank will provide the dairyman with the means of properly cooling his milk and keeping it clean and sweet until it goes to market. The tank should be 27 inches deep inside, 36 inches wide inside and 2 feet long for each two cans.

Gassing Proves Safe

In Eliminating Rats

In rural districts, cities and farms where poisoning rats might be hazardous to animals and children, trapping and gassing are valuable supplements to clean-up and rat-proofing methods, points out Harold Hunderson, Iowa State college. Gassing with calcium cyanide is a quick and easy method of killing rats under tight floors and in underground burrows. The calcium cyanide should be used in a gas gun and blown with force throughout the entire system.

Isolation Urged for

Control of Newcastle

Newcastle disease, the new virus disease of chickens and turkeys, is still a serious problem. Very little is known in regard to this disease. The most serious cause of spread of Newcastle disease seems to be contact between birds, according to Washington station officials. Poultrymen are urged that birds which have been diagnosed to have Newcastle be kept in strict isolation and sanitary means practiced.

The Sweeping Tides

by H. M. EGBERT

W. N. U. SERVICE

Mark Darrell, young American lumberman, is boss of a lumber camp near St. Victor, Canada. He has fallen in love with Madame Madeleine Kinross, young widow who owns the timberland. She returns Mark's affection. Her lawyer, Horace Broussac, is also a suitor and Mark's enemy. Broussac persuades Andre Galipeault and two other men to waylay Mark and put him in a cabin in the path of a forest fire. Nat Page, Mark's assistant, tries to rescue him. Meanwhile Eric Kinross, Madeleine's husband, returns, seeking vengeance on Broussac, Galipeault and others. He hurries over to the lighthouse to greet his wife Madeleine. On the way he passes Broussac, but does not recognize him. The lawyer is fleeing.

CHAPTER IX

And Madeleine heard! She knew! A look of awful fear came upon her face, but it was not such fear as Broussac had inspired. This was her man, her husband, whom she had known since she was a child. She never loved him, but she had always respected him, and she knew that he was incapable of laying a hand upon her, however hot his anger.

Now he was standing, towering, before her, looking down at her. Then he swept her into his arms and kissed her. He paid no attention to old Andre, who, seeing that Madeleine was safe, slipped back to the lighthouse, where he had left the boy, Georges, in charge.

"I have come back, Madeleine, my little one. Are you not glad to see me?"

"I always knew you were not dead, Eric," she sobbed.

"But did you not know where I had been?"

"No! Nobody would tell me. For a long time they pretended that you were dead, but I thought your head had been injured by a flog, and that you were in an insane asylum, somewhere in America."

The seigneur laughed. Big men are accustomed to treachery, which is the defense of weaklings. It didn't matter what lies they had told about him.

"No, my little one, I got into trouble on St. Pierre. There was some good brandy there, and I drank too much. I killed a revenue man, but it was in a fair fight. They sent me to a prison in France, and last month I was set free, and so I came back to you."

Madeleine couldn't speak; she sobbed silently against his shoulder.

"There are debts I have to pay, to the men who betrayed me, instead of standing by me," the seigneur went on, "but tonight I am thinking only of thee. I am not quite sane, Madeleine, cherie. In thine arms, perhaps I shall regain my sanity and be better able to decide what to do. I came back intending to kill at least one man, who obtained money for my defense and kept it. . . . where is Cousin Horace Broussac?" Eric cried suddenly.

"I do not know," cried the girl in sudden terror.

"He is not here?"

"No! No!"

"He had better not come here, if he values that wretched life of his. And now about this Monsieur Darrell, of whom I have heard. Eh?" He tilted Madeleine's face in his hand and looked down into her eyes.

"He is safe in St. Victor. He must be safe. He could not have been trapped in that fire across the neck."

"You have not kissed me, little one."

"I cannot—yet, Eric. Oh, Eric, understand! I was only fifteen when you married me, and I am a woman now. Five years have passed. You must give me time to make adjustments."

Mighty Eric Becomes A Hero

There was a devil of tender mockery in the seigneur's brown eyes. He let the girl go, and stood looking down upon her.

"And so you love this American?"

"I sent him away. I am your wife, and I knew that you were not dead."

"You love him!"

Madeleine was silent, only looked up piteously into Eric's face.

"Well—you love him?"

"Ah, Eric, forgive me! Five years is such a long time, and I was only a child." Suddenly she flung herself at Eric Kinross' feet.

Kinross raised her. "That is all right. That is natural, my little one," he answered tenderly.

Voices were shouting from the steps above them, leading down from the natural bridge. A man came into view. Nearly all the hair was singed from his head, and what had been his clothes was now a mass of blackened tinder, in which the bright points of sparks glowed and vanished and appeared again. It was Nat Page, and behind him came a dozen ragged figures.

"Is Darrell here? Mark Darrell, is he here?" Nat shouted huskily.

"He is not here," cried Madeleine. "Isn't he at St. Victor?"

"No! He must have been trapped in the fire. The flames were too strong for us. We may be able to reach him across the bridge. There's a strip that hasn't caught yet."

Madeleine ran to Nat, caught him by the arm. "Oh, save him, save him!" she cried.

"Eh? I go with you!" shouted the seigneur. "Come, let us hurry! Good-by, Madeleine, my little, precious one!"

It was the tall, gaunt figure of Eric Kinross that led the tired little group. He strode across the bridge and plunged like a madman into the smoke-filled wilderness, dashing the bushes aside with his bare fists.

They followed him, somehow believing against belief that he could reach the cabin.

A roar of fire, a wall of flames leaped up against them. They recoiled, tried to beat their way through, fell back—even Nat Page fell back, dropped groaning into the heart of the smoke. But Eric Kinross plunged straight into that wall of fire, fighting it exultantly with his bare hands, and shouting, always shouting.

They heard him striding along the trail into the distance. Then the wind blew the flames away, and Nat and two of his men dashed through. Following that voice, chanting and shouting, seeing occasional faint glimpses of that tall figure in the distance.

Fire all about them—then suddenly the cabin, one side a mass of flames. Eric Kinross in the cabin. Nat Page fell back again; he could make no further headway, and his limbs would no longer support him.

Eric Kinross was striding out, carrying the figure of a man in his arms, wrapped in his own smoldering clothes. He was all but nude

Nat saw that Mark was on his knees again beside Madeleine, who hung, fainting, in his arms. "I'll be back in a few minutes," he said. "We'll get Madame Kinross into her cottage. Take care you don't fall over the cliffs."

All the remaining men in St. Victor, and many of the women, had come racing along the shore road when they saw that the light was out. For that is something that is supposed never to happen, perhaps has never happened more than half-a-dozen times in the history of the world. Then suddenly the light was on again, and the beam was sending its far-reaching, one-two, one-two, across the Gulf.

the fogs, and not even the foghorn sounded any longer.

Suddenly, by the dull flicker of the flames, that lit up the whole horizon, Nat could see a small white yacht heading straight for the rocks. Broussac's yacht! He shouted, and peals of mocking laughter came back from somewhere near the lighthouse.

The yacht crew had seen its peril. Nat could hear the race of the engines as it fought against the sweeping tides, to gain the middle of the Gulf again. The vessel was so near Nat could hear voices shouting in despair from aboard her.

The flames were sweeping steadily backward, forming a brilliant illuminant against the dark screen of the night. The white yacht stood out as if some inferno of flames was playing about her, and on board her could be seen three figures, one of which was Broussac's.

Their gestures of despair, the sweep of the boiling current as the waves lifted her toward the ledge of rocks, filled Nat with horror.

Then suddenly he heard the crash, high above the roar of the breakers. For a moment the yacht seemed to remain poised in mid-air; then she vanished as the undertow sucked her down. Now there was nothing visible but the spume-lashed rocks at the base of the invisible shaft that should have shot its warning light far out across the Gulf.

Again Nat heard that peal of horrible laughter, dying away in a sort of wailing cry.

Then the lighthouse boy was running up. "Monsieur, he has gone mad. He has plugged up the flow of the oil vapor."

"Can you start the light again?"

"Assuredly, but I am afraid of Andre."

Nat saw that Mark was on his knees again beside Madeleine, who hung, fainting, in his arms. "I'll be back in a few minutes," he said. "We'll get Madame Kinross into her cottage. Take care you don't fall over the cliffs."

All the remaining men in St. Victor, and many of the women, had come racing along the shore road when they saw that the light was out. For that is something that is supposed never to happen, perhaps has never happened more than half-a-dozen times in the history of the world. Then suddenly the light was on again, and the beam was sending its far-reaching, one-two, one-two, across the Gulf.

At Last Madeleine and Mark Can Be Happy

An old, gray-bearded man was huddled on the stones at the foot of the lighthouse. When they shook Andre Galipeault by the arm, he stared at them without knowing them. He had become a child, and he would never know anybody again.

A storm had come up across the Gulf. The rain came down in sheets. Slowly the long night waned, while the searchers moved to and fro among the rocks. It was morning before they found the bodies of Horace Broussac and the two sailors, wedged in among the crevices of the rocks, where the seas had flung them. Great wads of water-soaked bills, a little fortune, were in Broussac's pockets.

But the body of Eric Kinross was never found. Strong, simple, primitive, he seemed to belong rather to the elements than to the world of man, and the elements had claimed him for their own.

Madeleine had understood everything. Father Lacombe had spent a good part of the night with her, and they had bandaged Mark's burns. Mark was conscious, and able to grin at Nat Page when he came in with the latest news.

But Nat didn't think the time was propitious to say very much just then, except to inform Mark about Broussac and Old Andre. It was Mark who asked who it was had burst into the hut and torn away his ropes as if they had been mere strings. Then Nat had to tell him about Kinross. After that there was a long silence.

"I guess this rain's put out the fire," said Nat. "We must have lost a lot of timber, but there will be plenty of time to cut fresh drag-ways further back, before we start lumbering operations in the fall."

Mark nodded. He was still trying to take it all in. He had never quite believed that Eric Kinross was alive, and his return, to save his life, and give his own for it, had shocked him badly. Also he was in pain from the burns. He had abandoned all hope at the time when Kinross came rushing into the cabin.

"There won't be any more trouble with St. Victor," said Nat. And, in fact, half-a-dozen of the habitants had looked shyly into the cottage to inquire for Mark. And Father Lacombe had come, after Mark became fully conscious, to grasp his hand.

And then there was Madeleine. She was still tending Mark, and he could see that she was moving about the cottage in a dream-like stage, as if all the past was quite unreal to her.

Some day, Mark vowed, he would bring reality into their relationship. For the present he was content to lie back and rest.

(THE END)

THE hot spot of baseball in 1947 will be the Yankees—the Yankees and Larry MacPhail. For both are hot spots.

Even with a team that finished third last season, the Yankees smashed all past attendance records by an incredible margin. They were the first major league team in history to pass the two million mark with a few hundred thousand to spare.

But what about 1947? The new manager of the Yankees, Bucky Harris, is one of the best in baseball. His assistant is Charlie Dressen of the Dodgers, who, among the insiders, is given almost equal credit with Leo Durocher for the remarkable showing of the Dodgers last season.

Dressen is one of the most underrated men in baseball. He has proved in the past to be an able manager and he has proved with Brooklyn's nimble Dodgers that he could slip into the second slot and still be a star.

The combination of Harris and Dressen should give the Yankees ranking class at the top. Their next problem will be a ball club that can handle the Red Sox-Tiger threat in 1947.

MacPhail is not the type to accept a third-place brand with what you might call equanimity. MacPhail is too fiery and keen a personage to accept the general verdict that it will take two or three years to bring the Yankees from the barren lands into the uplands, which they held and defended for so long a time.

A team that has Robinson as catcher, plus an able infield—Heinrich at first, Stirnweiss at second, Rizzuto at short and Brown at third—plus DiMaggio, Keller and others in the outfield, can't go badly two years in a row.

What about the pitching? One answer is that Yankee pitching allowed fewer earned runs last season than any other club except the Cardinals.

New men will be added and the present guess is that the Yankees of 1947 will be a long leap beyond the Yankees of 1946. Their hitless postwar dip should be over by now, especially with such normally good hitters as DiMaggio, Rizzuto, Stirnweiss and Heinrich.

The Army-Navy Game

Pomp and pageant still mean a lot to this country. Army and Navy at Philadelphia will be a sellout for 104,000 spectators, even if Army figures to win by 40 to 0. Which Army won't do.

While it appears as though there has never been an Army-Navy game that looked as one-sided, it must be remembered that Navy still has good football players. Navy has had a rough road this season, but so has Army. It will be different after 1946. Navy next fall probably will return better material than Army will have.

Navy is taking her postwar shel-lacking now. Navy already is passing through her major depression. Army still has one to face, as far as anyone can see. Any team that loses Blanchard, Davis, Foldberg, Poole, Tucker, Fuson and Enos, with only two replacements left from the 1946 starting team, must stare into the shadows for some time to come.

Army-Navy games are always closer than they figure to be. A year ago, Army ran up 21 points against Navy in the early going. Everyone looked for a 40 to 0 count. But after that first crash, Navy had the better of the argument in the last two periods.

So there not only will be an Army-Navy game, but also 104,000 spectators will be on hand to see it. And it can be a much closer meeting than one might predict.

Football vs. Baseball

No matter how peaceful the skyline seems to be, there is always someone taking the joy out of life. Now an inquisitive correspondent wants to know which game draws the greater number of people—football or baseball. He also asks for an exact check on this count.

For one thing, baseball has a far longer season—five and a half months against two and a half months. For another thing there are close to 200 football teams with varying degrees of real drawing power as compared to a considerable less number of baseball teams that can match this collection at the gate.

Big league baseball last season drew close to 18 million customers through the turnstiles. The Yankees drew well over two million admissions in 154 games. No college or pro football team can match this count in nine or 10 games.

Army, Notre Dame, Michigan, Navy, Pennsylvania and Ohio State are among the leaders this fall. They should average around 400,000 spectators each. For example, Army drew 86,000 at Michigan, 80,000 against Notre Dame, 75,000 against Pennsylvania, and will play before 100,000 against Navy.

Loud Speaker in Plane

A little-known wartime development of the U. S. navy was a loud-speaker system for giving orders from an airplane to persons on the ground.

Weighing 500 pounds, the device enables a man flying at 10,000 feet to be heard by everyone within an eight-square-mile area beneath him.

on record as not opposing any proposals for channel improvement and for the improvement of levees and flood walls.

On state matters, the delegates said it would sponsor and support legislation necessary to continue to secure state funds for the improvement of farm to highway roads, and urged legislation to permit townships and road districts to combine into larger units for road and bridge improvement and maintenance.

Delegates said they would sponsor legislation to clarify and simplify the 100 percent assessment law and make the tax rate limitations more effective and require local units of government to use uniform budget forms.

Rural schools also received major consideration. Legislation was recommended providing that state financial aid be withdrawn from administrative grade school districts with fewer than 10 pupils, and from high schools with fewer than 10 pupils per grade. It also was stated that the qualifying figure for elementary school districts gradually should be raised to 15 pupils and for high schools to 20 pupils per grade.

Coming — "THE KILLERS"

Division of General Motors Corp., announced in Detroit.

Attaining the half million figure represents a considerable postwar achievement, Mr. Keating pointed out inasmuch as Chevrolet was strike bound throughout the first quarter of 1946. And during the remaining months of production labored against material shortages, suppliers' strikes and other disturbing elements.

The figures indicate that of the half million vehicles, nearly 57 percent were passenger cars, the remainder trucks.

Impartial industry statistics show that Chevrolet was first to attain the half million figure, despite its late start in the competitive race.
